

My 7th grade experience is a whirlwind of tornadoes and colorful flowers. It is vibrant, pastel colors and dull, neutral colors. The pastel colors represent memorable, joyful moments. The pastel colors also remind me of when a girl, that I see as a higher status person, gave me a compliment about my looks. The good that came from my 7th grade experience is the friends and experiences I had this year. On the other hand, stress and an overload of work from classes. There is a chaotic mess of tornadoes and small flowers blooming in unexpected places. The tornadoes represent the stress and difficult challenges that I faced during 7th grade. The flowers represent the good outcomes and positive details of my 7th grade experience. My 7th grade year has taught me to view events within the frame of a crucial truth: school is just one important thing in my life, and I must leave time and energy for other things I am more passionate about.
